We will also:

LAUNCH THE CENTRE FOR WORKPLACE ENGAGEMENT!

The use of restorative practice in the workplace a natural extension of our restorative practice work in churches, schools and communities. The exciting new Centre for Workplace Engagement, now offered through Shalem, is a partnership led by numerous leaders from labour, business and non-profit organizations. The new Centre has been established in consultation with staff at the Canadian Standards Association, which has recently introduced its new national voluntary standard on Psychological Health and Safety in the Workplace.

Come hear Rev. Bruce Schenk speak on the topic of Building Healthy Relationships in Workplaces.

More and more we hear about “bullying” and “harassment” in the workplace. How can workplaces become more connected communities, where relationships are healthy, and where people and businesses thrive? Based on his extensive experience across Canada, Bruce will speak about the importance of explicit relational practice in all of our workplaces.

Bruce Schenk, a Lutheran pastor, has served as the Director the International Institute for Restorative Practices—Canada since 2008. Bruce has worked extensively with schools, school boards, churches and in other contexts across Ontario and Canada in restorative practices training and development. Prior to working in educational and other settings, Bruce served in youth and adult justice, including acting as the Lead for the Ontario government's implementation team of the restorative justice provisions of Canada's Youth Criminal Justice Act. He also served as a chaplain at Brookside Youth Centre. Bruce is an active participant in Shalem's FaithCARE program and in the Centre for Workplace Engagement.
